“I was very pleased to have the opportunity to display my paintings and other 2D artwork at Pilgrim in February 2020.

Vikki Waller, from The Royal Adelaide Arts Society, is an experienced and knowledgeable curator. She gave me excellent advice and encouragement. As the selection of works was up to me, it gave me the opportunity to display a cohesive exhibition. This in turn, helped me see a consistent focus and the development of ideas over a 30 year period. I was particularly appreciative of the opportunity to emphasise a Christian approach, without pressure to be commercial, although selling is certainly encouraged too.

Vikki assisted in positioning and hanging the works on the professional standard hanging system, and printed display labels for the works, a catalogue and my CV.

Patricia Rademaker, with expertise in journalism and marketing, interviewed me. Publicity was well handled.

Thanks to the volunteers who made it possible for the church to be open during the week.

Pilgrim’s significant status in Adelaide’s history and culture makes it a valuable exhibition venue. Visitors who come for other reasons – church services, tourism, concerts and performances – are a new audience for the artist. The quiet atmosphere is very conducive to contemplation.

With thanks and much appreciation for this opportunity”.
